SQUARE MEDICAL CENTER

INSUFFICIENT PAYMENT POLICY

Square Medical Center is committed to providing high-quality medical care while maintaining clear and consistent payment expectations. We understand that financial difficulties may arise and encourage patients to contact us promptly if they have concerns regarding an outstanding balance.

1. Payment Expectations

Patients are responsible for applicable fees, copayments, deductibles, coinsurance, and other patient-responsibility amounts. Unless prior arrangements have been approved, amounts due at the time of service are expected to be paid before or at the time services are provided.

2. Insufficient Payments

If a payment does not cover the full amount due, the remaining balance will remain the patient's responsibility. Square Medical Center may contact the patient to arrange payment of the outstanding balance.

3. Past-Due Balances

Balances not paid by the applicable due date may be considered past due. Square Medical Center may take appropriate steps to collect outstanding balances in accordance with applicable laws and practice policies.

4. Financial Difficulties

Patients experiencing financial hardship are encouraged to contact Square Medical Center to discuss available payment options.

5. Non-Payment

Failure to resolve an outstanding balance may affect the patient's ability to schedule non-emergency future services and may result in additional collection efforts, as permitted by applicable law.

Square Medical Center is committed to communicating with patients regarding their financial responsibilities and working toward reasonable resolution of outstanding balances.
